Welcome to the resident class of 2015

The Campbell Foundation is pleased to welcome eight outstanding new residents and five fellows to our training program this year. They are a diverse group, but all share a background of academic excellence and a commitment to orthopaedics.

These new residents will spend their first year rotating among a general hospital, emergency room, veterans hospital, and trauma center, further developing their knowledge and surgery skills in a variety of medical disciplines to prepare for their intensive orthopaedic studies. They will work in general surgery for six months, orthopaedic surgery for three months, and a combination of general and orthopaedic surgery for an additional three months.

- Michael Azzam, M.D., St. Louis University
- Clayton Bettin, M.D., Ohio State University
- Michael Hames, M.D., University of Texas – Galveston
- David Heinsch, M.D., Medical College of Georgia
- Jeff Kutsikovitch, M.D., Ohio State University
- Troy Roberson, M.D., Indiana University
- Byron Stephens, M.D., University of Tennessee
- Jonathon Wright, M.D., University of Alabama

The Campbell Foundation also welcomes these fellows who have completed an orthopaedic residency and will spend up to 12 months of additional training in their chosen orthopaedic subspecialty:

- Jennifer Brey, M.D., Pediatric Fellow – Louisville, KY
- Levi Nathan Gause, M.D., Foot & Ankle Fellow – Cincinnati, OH
- Peter Godleski, M.D., Adult Reconstruction Fellow – Wilkes-Barre, PA
- Richard Rainey, M.D., Sports Medicine Fellow – Tupelo, MS
- Jan Paul Szatkowski, M.D., Trauma Fellow – Chicago, IL
